Democrats of sowing division by 'downplaying progress' on election security The Hill's Campaign Report: Arizona shifts towards Biden | Biden prepares for drive-in town hall | New Biden ad targets Latino voters Why Democrats must confront extreme left wing incitement to violence MORE (I-Vt.) will introduce legislation to eliminate a controversial $250 million tax loophole that aids wealthy investors. Sanders will seek to close a loophole that permits the nation's top four drug and insurance companies to spend money lobbying Congress on the personal, private health care accounts they established under the 2010 health care law. The four companies — American International Group, Cigna, Humana and WellPoint — are the biggest players in the health care accounts, and their earnings drive up the overall profits of these firms that distribute prescription drugs and provide health insurance for an estimated 50 million Americans, among them retirees and workers who struggle to afford coverage on their own. ADVERTISEMENT Sanders called the loophole “gutting” the Affordable Care Act, and said the federal income tax subsidies that help enrollees afford their insurance, and the “risk corridors” that pay insurers extra money to cover people whose plans don’t work as promised, would be damaged if Congress doesn’t close the loophole. Under the 2010 health care law, AIG, Cigna, Humana and WellPoint are allowed to spend up to $20 million each to lobby against the law’s tax increases, as long as they don’t lobby against the law itself. A bill to close the loophole passed the House, but died in the Senate.

In a statement, Sanders said his bill is “a first step in a multi-step effort to ensure that health care is 3da54e8ca3
