The ministry's statement came in the backdrop of Prime Minister Narendra Modi's announcement last week for treatment of coronavirus patients by medical staff members and hospitals at their respective homes. Addressing the media a day after that announcement, Minister of State for Health Harsh Vardhan said the Centre was already making efforts to provide treatment to several COVID-19 patients at their homes. "It is a great initiative by the prime minister in this coronavirus crisis," he said. Reiterating the government's commitment to "de-risk" people living in the country, Vardhan said the ministry was working on a model to identify residents who were already being treated for Covid-19 and vulnerable patients who have a chronic illness, but who have not been

History . Nasal delivery of insulin by spray-dried nanoemulsions. This study investigated the nasal transport of insulin by spray-dried nanoemulsions (SDN) and evaluated the effects of composition of the carrier oil and the surfactant on nasal drug delivery. SDN consisting of soybean oil, glycerol, and surfactants (Polaxamer P407 and Pluronic F127) were prepared. The average particle sizes of all SDN formulations were smaller than 50 nm. The distribution of nanoemulsions in nasal cavity was investigated by fluorescence analysis of coumarin labeled into polylactide nanoparticles (FL-PLN). The FL-PLN loaded SDN were examined for the nasal transport of insulin. The results showed that the FL-
